Overview

WheatonArts is an internationally acclaimed arts community dedicated to nurturing the creative spirit in us all. The Festival of Fine Craft, now in its 25th year, is our premier annual event and one of the most highly-rated shows in the Mid-Atlantic region. Named one of Sunshine Artist's 200 Best in 2016, 2018, 2019, and 2022, this campus-wide event continues to grow in attendance, programming, and quality overall. Approximately 150 exhibitors, ranging from new and emerging artists to masters in their mediums, are carefully selected by a jury of WheatonArts professionals and experienced staff artists. We take pride in maintaining an artist-friendly show with a high-quality standard and continually work toward a balance of mediums, styles, and techniques. WheatonArts provides convenient day-before setup, overnight security, and unequalled hospitality throughout the show. Exhibitors receive lodging at reduced rates at some nearby hotels. Open Artist Studios, craft demonstrations, live music, exceptional food, and various interactive activities add to the excitement, making the festival both entertaining and educational.

Attendance & Sales

WheatonArts Festival of Fine Craft is attended annually by over 11,000 people from the Mid-Atlantic region. Our attendees are well-educated shoppers and collectors with a deep appreciation for unique, handmade items. Artist testimonials reveal the continued excitement and engagement of both new and loyal customers. Annual artist sales total more than $250,000 for the weekend. Individually, sales range up to $10,000 and average $2,500 to $3,000 per exhibitor.

Marketing Support

WheatonArts is dedicated to engaging the public and is continually expanding outreach to connect with new audiences and build excitement for this event. Our comprehensive marketing plan includes extensive print, radio, and electronic media campaigns, full-color publicity, and year-long promotion through our other events and programs. Marketing is done in-house and through the Spark Creative advertising agency, focused on keeping our audiences engaged and informed with the most up-to-date event information. Throughout the 2024 electronic campaign, WheatonArts obtained nearly 125,000 organic (non-paid) social media impressions. Our digital marketing campaign includes targeted email campaigns, national and regional digital event listings, and social media marketing for Instagram and Facebook. Exhibitors are featured on our website, in digital ads, and in notable "Festival Highlight" posts on social media leading up to the show.

WheatonArts provides each exhibitor with additional marketing opportunities, including show cards for mailings or display, a social media toolkit, and website links to share for promoting your business and the show as a whole. Our marketing and event teams work side by side to ensure the best possible communication between artists, staff, and audiences.

New and Returning Artists

WheatonArts welcomes new and returning artists to the Festival of Fine Craft. Upon applying, all applicants must select their jury category. Returning artists (consecutive years only) will have the option to request their previous location*. All booth locations are determined post-jury, ensuring a mix of mediums throughout the campus and providing a positive experience for exhibitors and attendees. Indoor booths are limited and are determined based on a "first applied, first supplied" basis.

Please note that you must be a returning artist from the previous year(s), and you may only request your last location. Special location requests are considered for health purposes only.*

Demonstrating Artists

WheatonArts welcomes artists willing to demonstrate their techniques during the Festival. Please indicate on the application if you are willing and able to demonstrate inside your booth space during the Festival of Fine Craft. If accepted, your technique will be evaluated for demonstration purposes. Demonstrating artist slots are limited, and acceptance into the Festival does not guarantee a demonstration booth. You will be notified of your status as a traditional exhibitor or "Demonstrating Artist" on your acceptance letter. Demonstrating artists are offered a discounted booth rate for service during the Festival. For questions, please email our event coordinator at ljohns@wheatonarts.org.

Foods must be appropriately stored, sealed, and labeled to be sold. Labels must include the name and address of the seller or processor, the product's name, the ingredient list in descending order, and the net weight of the product.

Please proofread and edit your biography for grammar and structure before submitting it.

Jury Standards*

The Festival of Fine Craft is a juried show to ensure high-quality works are exhibited each year. We instruct each juror to adhere to the following guidelines in making decisions:

- All works are handmade and reflect a unique vision, refined technique, and consistency in quality.
- Work submitted is of original design and is the direct product of the applicant or made under the applicant's direct supervision.

- Booth images must showcase a well-conceived and executed display. The exhibitor or work submitted must be seen clearly in the booth image.

NOTE: Any application submitted without clear digital images will NOT enter the jury process. Please see the image requirements section for more information.*

Jury Process

The WheatonArts Festival of Fine Craft Jury meets in mid-May to review all completed applications. When reviewing applications, jurors consider images, descriptions, and any information supplied in the application pertaining to the work itself. Accepted applicants will receive an acceptance packet via mail. They will be assumed to be exhibiting unless the applicant notifies the event coordinator otherwise. A waitlist in each medium is created based on applicants who meet the accepted criteria but were not chosen to exhibit. WheatonArts does not release individual juror comments and does not explain why a submission was or was not accepted. The event coordinator does not participate in the jury process and will not answer questions regarding the jury's decision.

Acceptance Criteria

Applicants must categorize their work based on the primary medium (clay, fiber, glass, leather, metal, mixed medium, photography, or wood) or type (wearable, fine art, other, artisan food, jewelry*, furniture). WheatonArts reserves the right to reclassify prior to the jury and the event if the type of work pictured does not fit the category selected or is more appropriate in another category. Artists may apply in more than one medium category; however, they can only sell work in their accepted category. Artists intending to sell jewelry in any medium must apply under the "Jewelry" category.

NOTE: Any artist submitting jewelry for the jury must apply in the jewelry category. Jewelry images on applications in any other category will be removed. ONLY accepted artists in the jewelry category are permitted to bring jewelry. Artists may apply in more than one medium but may sell work ONLY in their accepted category. The bodies of work displayed at the event must reflect the artist's accepted application.

Accepted vs. Waitlisted

WheatonArts will accept up to 150 artists into the 2025 Festival of Fine Craft. Applicants are waitlisted if the accepted number of applications exceeds 150 or if the number of applicants in one category exceeds the amount of exhibitors permitted in that category. Waitlisted applicants will be on stand-by up to the week before the event or until canceled by the applicant.
